THE HANDLY WILL CASE.-The bill in the Handly will case, involving a million dollars in bequests to the city of Winchester, was filed in the Circuit Court there yesterday afternoon. In their bill the Handly trustees aver that the city of Winchester refused to accept the city of winchester refused to cocept the trust, but procured an act of the legislature to enable the Common Coun-cil to appoint trustees to take charge of the fund and administrater the trust. They further aver that the board of trustees received moneys from time to time and invested the same in Virginia bonds; that they collected the interest and reinvested. The bill also charges that these views of the rights, powers and duties of the board of trustees are erroneous, and that the only power the act of 1896 left to the Common Council was the power to require reports of the board, and the power to adopt or reject any plan for the ultimate disposition of the fund reported by the board. The court is asked definitely to settle this question as to the powers and rights of the City Council and the board. The bill prays that the trustees may be instructed by the court as to their rights, duties and responsibilities, and that the direction to invest in Virginia bonds until the accumulation reaches $500,000 be decided null and void.
